I. BACKGROUND

On June 2, 2017 OHA released the first of the three-part series dedicated to kāne and Native Hawaiian males, Kānehō‘ālanī: Transforming the Health of Native Hawaiian Men, a report on the well-being of Hawaiian kāne which can be viewed online: www.oha.org/kanehealth.

The second of the three-part series will focus on the health and well-being of Native Hawaiian females. It is estimated to be 100 pages of rich cultural information and contemporary data that leads to a call for action and policy recommendations to improve the conditions of wāhine in the following chapters: motherhood, emotional and mental well-being, physical health, economic self-sufficiency, partner violence and incarceration, and leadership and civic engagement. Interviews with wāhine leaders will be woven throughout the narrative.

The Native Hawaiian women's health report will start with the values, strength, and legacy of Haumea as a principle female deity to wāhine and their female spiritual essence within the kānaka 'ōiwi belief system.

Like the kāne and Native Hawaiian males health report, it will be made available for free on the web and hard copy. The expected release date for the women's health report is May 2018 when it will be presented widely and used broadly in use but may not be limited to the fields of education, health, business, human services, labor, and social justice.
